Analysis of 70 recent development projects in 40 municipalities in the Denver region, based on student case studies, for an education/teaching article

Over the last 6 years, students in Dr. Makarewicz’s Urban Development course in the MURP program have analyzed recently developed projects throughout the Denver region.

Dr. Makarewicz and a graduate student are analyzing the projects to write an instructional article for the Journal of Planning Education and Research on the development timeline, and differences in the planning review process by project and municipality.

Little has been written on this topic in the last 30 years, but it is a major aspect of most city planners’ jobs.
