

Carrie Makarewicz
Associate Professor
with
Jeff Vincent, UC Berkeley,
Ariel Bierbaum, Univ. of Maryland

Does transport support parents and youth, allowing both more time and freedom?

Case study research

- School districts aren't required to provide transport. Many are cutting, reducing, charging, or looking to public transit
- In response: parents and advocates pushed for free or reduced public transit passes for students.

Policy solutions

Advocates see value of infrastructure integration (II) : use public transit when yellow buses are cut.

But II is not simple:

- Neither school districts or transit agencies have enough money
- Societal decision: fund safe and affordable youth transportation OR leave it to parents?

AC Transit to Cancel Supplemental OUSD School Bus Routes

ACT board to meet Wednesday.

By Darwin BondGraham @Darwinbondgraha

Email Tweet Share 642 Print 1 post

Esther Gulli was surprised last September to learn that AC Transit planned to cut the bus route her kids rely on to get to school. Children attend Montero School, one of the Oakland

NEWS > EDUCATION

Denver Public Schools bus system leaves many students at the curb

By MONTE WHALEY | mwhaley@denverpost.com | The Denver Post

End of the line for city-funded transit passes for Portland Public Schools? Yes, please: Editorial Agenda 2017

Updated May 12, 2017 Post

climate-test policy that requires every decision by City Hall to consider and prioritize the Earth's health; fund YouthPass, a transit pass for those under 18; an Oregon version of U.S Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez's (D-NY) Green New Deal; and for Mayor Ted Wheeler to stay in Portland and to not attend the C40 World Mayors Summit in Copenhagen, Denmark, unless their demands are met.

Oakland: AC Transit decides to hold community meeting after crowd pleads to save school bus routes

'A delicate dance': In City Council hearing, MTA, Baltimore school officials discuss bus plans for students

By COLIN CAMPBELL
BALTIMORE SUN | SEP 09, 2020

Research Assistant:
Camron Bridgford

